CONTRIBUTORS

Hedy Law received her PhD from the University of Chicago in 2007. She was the AMS Howard Mayer Brown Fellow in 2005–06 and won the Indiana University Press Prize for the best student paper presented at the Midwest Chapter of the American Musicological Society. From 2007 to 2009 she was Collegiate Assistant Professor and Junior Fellow of the Society of Fellows of the University of Chicago. She is now Assistant Professor of Music History at Southern Methodist University.

Mina Yang is an assistant professor of musicology at the University of Southern California and the author of California Polyphony: Ethnic Voices, Musical Crossroads (University of Illinois Press, 2008). She is currently working on a book on classical music in the postmodern age.

Andy Fry teaches at King's College London. His principal research areas are jazz and music in twentieth-century France; he also has an interest in many forms of musical theatre. Several of these concerns come together in his published articles, on Josephine Baker, jazz, and black shows in interwar France. He is completing a monograph on African-American Music and Musicians in Paris to 1960.

Emiliano Ricciardi is a doctoral candidate in musicology at Stanford University. He holds a MPhil in musicology from the University of Cambridge, a laurea in music history from the University of Rome, and a diploma in violin performance from the Conservatory of Rome. His research areas are Italian 20th century music and late 16th century madrigals.

Laura Wittman is Assistant Professor of Italian and French Literature at Stanford University. She is editor of France and Italy: Imagined Geographies, and co-editor, with Lawrence Rainey and Christine Poggi, of Futurism: An Anthology. She has published articles on Marinetti, Ungaretti, Montale, Sereni, and the fin-de-siècle. She is currently working on a book on the invention of the Unknown Soldier Memorial during World War One.
