LANGUAGE AND COGNITION is a venue for the publication of high quality peer-reviewed research of a theoretical and/or empirical/experimental nature, focusing on the interface between language and cognition. It publishes research from the full range of subject disciplines, theoretical backgrounds, and analytical frameworks that populate the language and cognitive sciences, on a wide range of topics. Research published in the journal adopts an interdisciplinary, comparative, multi-methodological approach to the study of language and cognition and their intersection. Further details regarding topics published in the journal are available on the journal website: www.languageandcognition.net.

The journal is open to contributions from any theoretical perspective and methodological approach which bears on the scientific study of language and its relationship with cognition. In particular, it publishes both theoretical and empirical research.

LANGUAGE AND COGNITION invites authors to submit their manuscripts electronically to the General Editors (submissions@languageandcognition.net). Specific queries regarding possible submissions or other journal-related matters should be addressed to the Managing Editor, Stéphanie Pourcel at the above e-mail address. Electronic correspondence relating to the journal will only be accepted at this e-mail address. Books for review should be sent directly to the Review Editor, Dylan Glynn, Dept. of Linguistics, University of Lund, Box 201, Lund 22100, Sweden.

LANGUAGE AND COGNITION is published as one volume of two issues per year (approximately 300 pages), appearing in May and November.

Cognitive Linguistics presents a forum for linguistic research of all kinds on the interaction between language and cognition. Cognitive linguistics focuses on language as an instrument for organizing, processing and conveying information, and the journal is devoted to high-quality research on topics such as:

- the structural characteristics of natural language categorization (such as prototypicality, cognitive models, metaphor, and imagery)
- the functional principles of linguistic organization (such as iconicity)
- the conceptual interface between syntax and semantics
- the relationship between language and thought, including matters of universality and language specificity
- the experiential background of language-in-use, including the cultural background, the discourse context, and the psychological environment of linguistic performance.

(The Expression of Cognitive Categories [ECC] 3)

Time is the most fundamental category of human cognition and action, and all human languages have developed many devices to express it. These include verbal categories, such as tense and aspect, but also adverbials, particles, and principles of discourse organisation. This book is intended as a tutorial for the study of how time is expressed in natural languages. Its chapters take the reader through a number of foundational issues, such as the various notions of time and the various means to express it; other chapters are devoted to more specific questions, such as the acquisition of time, its modelling in formal semantics and in computational linguistics, or how its expression can be empirically investigated.
