The Exagoge of Ezekiel

HOWARD JACOBSON

Professor Jacobson examines the fragments that remain of this drama of the Jewish Exodus, written in Greek by a Jew living in Alexandria probably during the second century BC. The Exagoge is the sole surviving example of Jewish drama in Greek, the longest specimen of ancient Greco-Jewish poetry, and one of the earliest examples of Jewish exegesis and paraphrase of the Bible.

Horace on Poetry

Epistles Book II: The Letters to Augustus and Florus

C. O. BRINK

The culminating volume in Professor Brink's three-volume commentary on Horace's critical writings, this book contains a critical text of the letters to Augustus and to Florus. The second half of the book consists of essays discussing the epistles in broader literary terms.

Science and Speculation

Studies in Hellenistic Theory and Practice

Edited by JONATHAN BARNES, JACQUES BRUNSCHWIG,
MYLES BURNYEAT and MALCOLM SCHOFIELD

The five hundred years from 300 BC to AD 200 were a period during which Greek science made spectacular advances and Greek philosophy underwent dramatic changes. This volume brings together papers, from the Conférence Hellenistique held in Paris in 1980, on the development of science and philosophy and their interrelationship in this period.

Persuasion in Greek Tragedy

A Study of Peitho

R. G. A. BUXTON

Dr Buxton maintains that aspects of classical tragedy become clearer if we are sensitive to the overtones which certain concepts held for the original audience. He attempts to 'excavate' the concept of peitho and to uncover its various associations in politics, rhetoric, love, morality and philosophy; and he then turns to an analysis of selected plays by Aischylos, Sophokles and Euripedes in which persuasion plays a major role.

The Roman Empire 27 BC-AD 476

A Study in Survival
Chester G. Starr

In his latest book on the ancient world, Professor Starr focuses on the reasons behind the 500-year survival of the Roman Empire. In exploring the longevity of the Empire, he analyses the binding forces of government and army as initiated by Augustus, the maturing of these forces under subsequent emperors, and the eventual collapse of this network in the West. Illustrated £15.95 paperback £5.95

The Red-Figured Vases of Apulia

Volume II
A. D. Trendall and A. Cambitoglou

The present volume carries straight on from the first and deals with some 6000 vases of the second half of the fourth century B.C. Far more of the vases in this volume are of large dimensions often with multi-figured mythological or funerary scenes. Almost half the vases have a female head either as subsidiary decoration on the neck or shoulder or as the principal decoration on at least one side. Illustrated two volume set £75

Holy Land Pilgrimage in the Later Roman Empire

AD 312-460
Edward David Hunt

Pilgrimage to the Holy Land is a subject of perennial interest to all concerned with Christianity and its influence upon society, and in this wide-ranging book the author discusses its emergence in the Roman Empire under Constantine and some of its effects, ecclesiastical and secular, during the next 150 years. £16.50

Discoveries in the Judaean Desert

Volume 7, Qumran Grotte 4, III
Abbé Maurice Baillet

This volume continues the publication of the fragments of the Dead Sea Scrolls held in the Rockefeller Museum in Jerusalem. It contains fragments 482-520 from Qumran Cave 4, which consists mainly of liturgical texts but include some apocryphal fragments and some fragments of the War of the Sons of Light against the Sons of Darkness. Illustrated £60

A Handbook of Roman Art

Martin Henig (Editor)

A Handbook of Greek Art by Gisela Richter is already well-known for its authoritative survey of the visual arts in Greece. Martin Henig and a team of experts have now produced the companion volume about Roman art to coincide with the publication of the eighth edition of Richter's masterpiece. This book provides up-to-date information on the major and minor arts from Early Rome to Late Antiquity and, with over 250 illustrations, provides an essential source of reference for everyone interested in Roman art.

Aristotle's Eudemian Ethics

Books I, II, and VIII

Edited by M. J. Woods

This volume contains a translation of the three books of the Eudemian Ethics of most interest to modern philosophers, together with a philosophical commentary, the first in English on any part of this treatise. The author has taken account of recent important work on the text of the Eudemian Ethics as well as other work on Aristotle. £11.50 paperback £5.95 Clarendon Aristotle Series

Aristotle's De Generatione et Corruptione

C.J.F. Williams

Aristotle's De Generatione et Corruptione has its main topic coming into existence and ceasing to exist. It attempts to differentiate these phenomena from other sorts of change, such as alteration, growth, and aggregation and segregation of particles. The notes in this volume argue for certain interpretations of Aristotle's cosmological doctrines which conflict with those current in existing discussions of his work. £12.50
paperback £6.25 Clarendon Aristotle Series

Cicero: Epistulae Volume I

Edited by W.A. Watt

This volume completed the new edition of Cicero's letters in the Oxford Classical Texts series. All the manuscripts on which the text is based have been collated afresh, and special care has been taken to attribute correctly the conjectures of previous scholars. Second edition. £8.50

Rome: The Augustan Age

Edited by K. Chisholm and John Ferguson

This anthology has been designed to accompany the Open University Course A293 Rome: The Augustan Age. It is a compilation of primary sources in translation, covering Roman politics, art, literature, social history, and philosophy, and it will be useful to students in Universities, colleges, and schools, for there is nothing else which provides both its depth and range of evidence. The Early Greek Concept of the Soul

JAN BREMMER

Jan Bremmer discovers new insights into the early Greek concept of the soul with findings from social anthropology and folklore and illuminates an important stage in the genesis of the Greek mind.

Dionysiac Poetics and Euripides' Bacchae

CHARLES SEGAL

The Bacchae speaks to us more directly and disturbingly than perhaps any other work of classical Greece. Segal demonstrates that the Bacchae is not only about the god of religion, wine and madness but also about tragedy and the Dionysiac in relation to artistic illusion and truth.

Seneca's Troades

A Literary Introduction with Text,
Translation, and Commentary

ELAINE FANTHAM

Arguing that the Troades was not originally intended for the stage, the author discusses the play's reflection of Roman times and how Seneca's work was enriched by contact with the nobler world of poetry.

Oxford Studies in Ancient Philosophy

Editor: Dr J. Annas (St Hugh's College, Oxford)

Advisory Board: Professor Richard Sorabji (King's College, London), Dr Gisela Striker (University of Gottingen), Professor Martha Nussbaum (Harvard University), Professor A.A. Long (University of Liverpool).

In 1983 Oxford University Press will publish the first volume of a new periodical: Oxford Studies in Ancient Philosophy. This new publication will include substantial articles on a wide variety of aspects of Ancient Philosophy, survey articles of recent work in various fields, and reviews of major books. The contributions to the first issue will include: 'Philosophical Invective' by G.E.L. Owen; 'The Socratic Elenchus' by Gregory Vlastos; 'Drama and Dialectic in Plato's Gorgias' by Charles Kahn; 'Aristotelian Dualism' by Howard Robinson; 'The Role of oikeiosis in Stoic ethics' by Gisela Striker; 'Immaterial Causes' by Jonathan Barnes; and discussions of some recently published books.

Philosophers who may wish to offer contributions to the second volume should send their articles to the Editor, Dr J. Annas, at St Hugh's College, Oxford OX2 6LE. Authors are asked to observe the 'Notes for Contributors to Oxford Studies in Ancient Philosophy', copies of which may be obtained from the Editor. Books for review should also be sent to the Editor.
