Mao Tse-tung in the Scales of History

Edited by Dick Wilson
Editor of The China Quarterly

A specially commissioned volume offering an assessment of the career and place in history of Mao Tse-tung. Ten individual chapters, each written by an internationally known scholar and past contributor to The China Quarterly, concentrate on a particular aspect of Mao’s life or thought. The volume is intended for the general reader as well as the specialist and undergraduate. It is too soon for a final evaluation of Mao’s remarkable life but this comprehensive collection of the best of contemporary Chinese scholarship will be an essential part of that evaluation.

Manuscripts
The China Quarterly welcomes the submission of manuscripts from all scholars, including research students, on all aspects of contemporary China and from all points of view, including those which deal with Taiwan and Overseas Chinese. Articles on China prior to 1949 are also welcome, particularly, but not exclusively, when these relate directly to contemporary China or to the history of the Chinese Communist Party. Articles should be submitted, together with a duplicate copy, to the editorial office. They should be typed in double spacing and, preferably, conform to the styling of The China Quarterly.

The China Quarterly is published by the Contemporary China Institute of the School of Oriental and African Studies, London University. The views expressed in articles are those of individual authors and do not necessarily represent the views of the Contemporary China Institute.
For simplicity, only the administrative outlines and the major railroad trunk lines are included in this map of Shanghai, while other railways, most waterways, and all roads are excluded. Note that within Shanghai Municipality, the City Proper itself is very small geographically, covering only 54 square miles or 140 square kilometres. Yet it has a registered population of 5-7 million people, plus an unknown number of unregistered residents. With a population density of more than 40,740 persons per square kilometre, Shanghai City Proper is perhaps the world’s most densely populated central city. This high population density is rivalled by only a few other urban centres, including the old parts of Bombay and one section within Cairo City Proper.
