The North American Conference on British Studies

The Journal of British Studies, founded in 1961, is published by the University of Chicago Press under the auspices of the North American Conference on British Studies (NACBS). It was the result of the imaginative generosity of a Trinity College alumnus, Frederick E. Hasler (Hon. LL.D. 1957), who contributed funds to the college for the specific purpose of establishing a learned periodical in the field of British history.

The North American Conference on British Studies is a scholarly society affiliated with the American Historical Association and open to anyone in the United States and Canada interested in British civilization in its several aspects: historical, archaeological, literary, artistic, political, and sociological. Its North American constituency comprises about eight hundred members drawn from the fifty states and ten provinces. Affiliated with the parent organization are seven regional conferences (Northeastern, Middle Atlantic, South, Midwest, Western, Pacific Coast, and Northwest), each having its own officers and programs and with a combined membership of more than two thousand. The Conference convenes at least once a year in the autumn, usually in joint session with one of its regional affiliates. It seeks to encourage the serious study of British history, literature, and politics, as well as allied subjects, and among the general reading public through meetings, book prizes, and association with like-minded organizations in North America and Britain and through its publication program.

The Conference sponsors a wide variety of publications. Another journal, Albion, issued four times a year at Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina, and sent to all members of the parent organization, includes articles, proceedings of all meetings, and book reviews. The Conference's newsletter, the British Studies Intelligencer, also sent to members, is published at the University of Arizona and contains notices of meetings devoted to British studies, news of appointments, moves, and retirements and notes on current publications and research in progress. Other publications appear periodically and will be noted at such times.

Information about membership in the NACBS can be found on the copyright page of this journal.

With a new preface by the author!

THE PROBLEM OF SLAVERY IN THE AGE OF REVOLUTION, 1770-1823
DAVID BRION DAVIS

"[This] is a work of majestic scale, written with great skill. It explores the growing consciousness, during a half century of revolutionary change, of the oldest and most extreme form of human exploitation. Concentrating on the Anglo-American experience, [Davis] also pursues his theme wherever it leads in western culture. His book is a distinguished example of historical scholarship and art."—From the citation for the 1975 National Book Award

THE MID-VICTORIAN GENERATION 1846-1886
K. THEODORE HOPPEN

"A rich and nuanced picture of Britain between 1846 and 1886... Hoppen writes with uncommon fluency, grace, and wit."—David Cannadine, Columbia University

This third volume in the New Oxford History of England series covers the period dating from the repeal of the Corn Laws to the dramatic failure of Gladstone's first Home Rule Bill.

NAMES AND STORIES
Emilia Dilke and Victorian Culture
KALI ISRAEL

"Literary critics will find that Kali Israel’s discussion of the exceptional Emilia Pattison provides new insights into the ways in which narratives inform the best type of cultural history. Israel’s exemplary study reveals that material lives comprise both 'names' and 'stories', all involving conflicting kinds of personal, political, and social narration."—Joseph Bristow, UCLA

1998 416 pp. $45.00

THE CHANGING SHAPE OF ENGLISH NONCONFORMITY, 1825-1925
DALE A. JOHNSON

"Johnson’s scholarship is indeed of very high quality. All of his chapters are thoroughly researched and his judgments are sound. He succeeds not only in tracing the evolution of ministerial education, the changing roles of theologians and ministers, and the trends in theology with great skill, but also gives us a segment of the relationship between Nonconformity and the wider society, at least in regard to intellectual life."

—Paul T. Phillips, St. Francis Xavier University

1998 272 pp. $45.00

BRITAIN’S CENTURY
A Political and Social History, 1815-1905
W. D. RUBINSTEIN

"This major reinterpretation of an indigenous avant-garde aesthetic in interwar England challenges conventional views about the origins of modernism in art and design. Focusing on Frank Pick’s visionary efforts to transform the London Underground into a ‘people’s picture gallery’, Saler movingly portrays the struggle of medieval modernists to integrate modern art and craftsmanship into contemporary life."

—F. M. Leventhal, Boston University

WOMEN’S WORK
The English Experience 1650-1914
Edited by PAMELA SHARPE

Although the last few years have seen much new research in the areas of gender and women’s history, this is the only book to date that collects in a coherent way the most formative articles on our thinking about women’s work in English history for both the early modern and contemporary periods.

The History of Parliament on CD-ROM

The History of Parliament is the official history of the British House of Commons from 1386 to 1830, compiled by leading scholars and containing full biographies of all members, constituency surveys, and introductory surveys by period. It runs in print form to twenty-three large volumes—a total of some 16,200 pages or 13 million words. This CD-ROM makes available the complete set of volumes as printed, along with illustrations not included in the print version, many of them in color, and scanned in high-quality resolution to appear in separate illustration windows with full captions within the CD-ROM—historical shots of parliamentary buildings, portraits of speakers in the House of Commons, manuscripts and other parliamentary documents. The CD-ROM includes lists of members in each parliamentary session never previously reproduced and additional corrigenda never included in the printed volumes—all in a form that allows the user to search either freely or by designated fields; to annotate and save material; to print out pages; and to view different parts of the text concurrently on screen. Whether as a stand alone CD-ROM or as a networkable library resource, this disk provides ready electronic access to a major work of historical scholarship. It runs on PC Windows or Macintosh systems.

The Journal of John Wodehouse First Earl of Kimberley, 1862-1902

Angus Hawkins and John Powell

The political journal of John Wodehouse, first Earl of Kimberley (1862-1902), is one of the finest political diaries of the last half of the nineteenth century. Uniquely placed as an observer, Kimberley was the only Liberal to serve in every Cabinet of the Gladstone/Rosebery era. The Kimberley Journal is replete with humorous anecdotes, information regarding policy development, and acute observations about politicians and political situations.

Islam in Britain, 1558-1685

Nabil Matar

This book examines the impact of Islam on early modern Britain. Matar investigates the impact of the Qur'an and sufism on the people of Britain, showing that the British interacted widely with Islamic religion, culture and people through travel, in London coffee houses, in church, among converts to and from Islam, in sermons and in plays.

Science in the Service of Empire

Joseph Banks, the British State and the Uses of Science in the Age of Revolution

John Gascoigne

This book examines Sir Joseph Banks' role in promoting "imperial science," in the context of the consolidation of the British State during a time of extraordinary upheaval. Banks became the State's principal adviser in scientific matters, and Gascoigne shows how he used personal networks and patronage to integrate scientific concerns into the complex machinery of government.

The Future of the Imperial Past

A.G. Hopkins

This is the inaugural lecture by A. G. Hopkins, the Smuts Professor of Commonwealth History, in which Professor Hopkins assesses the present state of and prospects for imperial and Commonwealth history. He attempts to explain why the study of the British Empire and Commonwealth should regain the central place it once enjoyed in historical studies.

FROM CAMBRIDGE

Family, Commerce and Religion in London and Cologne
Anglo-German Emigrants, c.1000-c.1300
Joseph P. Huffman
This book explores the full range of social, economic, religious and cultural contacts between England and the German city of Cologne during the central Middle Ages, c. 1000 to c. 1300. A wealth of original archive material reveals an extensive network of English and German emigrants who were surprisingly successful in achieving assimilation into their new homelands.

Domesday Book and the Law
Society and Legal Custom in Early Medieval England
Robin Fleming
Domesday Book contains the most comprehensive, varied and monumental legal material to survive from England before the rise of the Common Law. This book argues that it can—and should—be read as a legal text. Stripped of its statistical information, Domesday Book provides a picture of what the law looked like, the ways in which it was changing, and the means whereby the inquest was a central event in the formation of English law.

Britain, Southeast Asia and the Onset of the Cold War, 1945-50
Nicholas Tarling
This detailed and original study throws new light on the evolution of British policy in Southeast Asia in the turbulent postwar period. Extensive archival research and insightful analysis of British comprise this companion volume to Tarling's Britain, Southeast Asia and the Onset of the Pacific War (CUP, 1996), which is a major contribution to the diplomatic and political history of Southeast Asia.

The Cambridge Apostles, 1820-1914
Liberalism, Imagination, and Friendship in British Intellectual and Professional Life
W.C. Lubenow
This book is a full-scale study of the world’s most famous secret society, the Cambridge "Apostles." It shows how the Apostles recruited their members, examines their intellectual preoccupations, and studies the careers of such figures as F. D. Maurice, Lytton Strachey and John Maynard Keynes by tracing the participation of the Apostles in politics, letters, and liberal reform in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

The Early Elizabethan Polity
William Cecil and the British Succession Crisis, 1558-1569
Stephen Alford
Traditionally, historians have argued that the court of Elizabeth I (1558-1603) was factional, divided among competing subjects who were manipulated by their Queen. This book provides a different account: of councilors who were united by two connected dangers, namely Catholic opposition to Protestant England and Elizabeth’s refusal to marry or to settle England’s succession. Working from the papers of the Queen’s secretary, William Cecil, the author has set this crisis in the context of events in Scotland, Ireland and mainland Europe, and has explored fully the long-term political impact of this succession crisis in the 1560s.

The Old Regime and the Revolution
Volume I: The Complete Text
Alexis de Tocqueville
Edited with an Introduction and Critical Apparatus by François Furet and Françoise Melonio
Translated by Alan S. Kahan
“Kahan has produced an outstanding new translation of Tocqueville’s Old Regime and the Revolution. His translation is accurate and captures the political/philosophical language of Tocqueville. He also succeeds in putting Tocqueville’s book into current English vocabulary and usage, yet gives us a dignified and eloquent rendering of Tocqueville’s text.”—James T. Schleifer, coeditor of the French edition of Tocqueville’s Democracy in America
Cloth $32.50

Ventures into Childland
Victorians, Fairy Tales, and Femininity
U. C. Knoepflmacher
“A cross between Coleridge and Sendak, Knoepflmacher writes the kind of glimmering cultural studies and gender analysis most of us only dream about. This is the most important book in Victorian studies in some time, all the more important because it is so witty and carefree, so at ease with its own significance.”—James R. Kincaid, University of Southern California
Cloth $35.00

Philosophical Melancholy and Delirium
Hume’s Pathology of Philosophy
Donald W. Livingston
“A splendid work which will provoke and reward discussion for at least a generation. It is entirely original in its attempt to offer a comprehensive and all-encompassing account of Hume’s view of philosophy.”—Peter Jones, Director, Institute for Advanced Studies in the Humanities, University of Edinburgh

The Nature of the Book
Print and Knowledge in the Making
Adrian Johns
“Adrian Johns brings to life the people who made, quite physically, the books that made the knowledge of the scientific revolution. Does it matter that Newton was published by a pornographer? Yes, if one wishes to understand the marketplace for books and knowledge in the early modern era.”—Paula Findlen

“Relying on detailed knowledge of original texts and a magisterial view of the enormous secondary literature, Johns has written a fine-grained study with considerable force of argument.”—Kirkus Reviews

Mesmerized
Powers of Mind in Victorian Britain
Alison Winter
“Mesmerism was, par excellence, the science that wasn't a science. Alison Winter explores this paradox to shed light on so many of the other ambiguities of Victorian England—its attitudes towards religion, women, and self-help—in an animated study which contributes equally to social history and the history of science.”—Roy Porter, author of The Greatest Benefit to Mankind: A Medical History of Humanity and London: A Social History
Cloth $30.00

A History of the Modern Fact
Problems of Knowledge in the Sciences of Wealth and Society
Mary Poovey
“Fact, objectivity, and truth have recently emerged as key topics for historians of the natural sciences. Mary Poovey brings the sensibilities of a literary critic and cultural historian to bear on ‘the sciences of wealth and society’ in eighteenth- and nineteenth-century Britain. A History of the Modern Fact is essential reading for anyone concerned with how and why we have come to distinguish ‘is’ from ‘ought,’ the ‘objective’ from the ‘subjective,’ and ‘individuality’ from ‘human nature.’”—Steven Shapin, author of A Social History of Truth: Civility and Science in Seventeenth-Century England

A Genealogy of Manners
Transformations of Social Relations in France and England from the Fourteenth to the Eighteenth Century

Royal Representations
Queen Victoria and British Culture, 1837-1876
Margaret Homans
"Drawing from a wide range of texts, Homans strikingly illuminates the cultural production of Victoria, in which both she and her subjects participated, a complex politics of representation that intertwined royal identity and royal agency and made being a form of doing. The resulting study culminates in a subtle and sophisticated portrait of Victoria's queenly power and her profound significance to the age which took her name."—Elizabeth Langland, University of Florida
