

Contents

List of Figures	page ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	I
Democracy, Domination, and Transnationalism	4
Theorizing the Material Inside/Outside of Popular Sovereignty	6
Articulated Racial Regimes and Imperial Popular Sovereignty	14
Migration, Nature, and Racial Capitalism	17
Chapter Overview	21
PART I IMPERIAL POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY
I Empire, Popular Sovereignty, and the Problem of Self-and-Other-Determination	29
1.1 Popular Sovereignty, Self-Determination, and Empire	31
1.2 Du Bois, Democratic Despotism, and Labor Politics	34
1.3 Self-and-Other-Determination	39
1.4 Excess and the Question of Self-Determination in Postcolonial Times	45
1.5 Self-Determination: From Lack to Excess, from Settler to Deterritorialized Domination	54
2 Socialism and Empire: Labor Mobility, Popular Sovereignty, and the Genesis of Racial Regimes	60
2.1 Method, Migration, and Mobility within Empire	62
2.2 Racial Capitalism and Mobility within Empire	65
2.3 Empire, Settlement, and the People	74
2.4 Critical Theory, Migration, and the Question of Empire	87

PART II REPRODUCTION THROUGH POPULAR RULE OF LABOR/NATURE
3	The Brown Family and Social Reproduction in US Capitalism 95
3.1	Social Reproduction: From Gender to Race, from Women to Families 98
3.2	Settlers, Guests, and Migrants 104
3.3	The Brown Family, Social Reproduction, and Immigration Enforcement 118
3.4	Racial Capitalism and the 2018 Crisis of Family Separations 130
4	Techno-Racism, Manual Labor, and Du Bois's Ecological Critique 133
4.1	Alienation: How and From What? 135
4.2	Land with Labor 137
4.3	Imperialism and the Destruction of the Natural Economy 140
4.4	Nature, Technology, and Racial Oppression 143
4.5	Popular Sovereignty, Racial Capitalism, and Ecology 163
PART III ANTI-IMPERIAL POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY
5	Anti-Imperial Popular Sovereignty and the Politics of Transnational Solidarity 169
5.1	The Domestic–Global Nexus 172
5.2	Political Worldliness as Anti-Imperial Popular Sovereignty 174
5.3	Self-Definition, Transnational Solidarity, and Emancipation from Symbiotic Elites 182
5.4	An Empire of Oligarchs 189
	Conclusion: Empire, Settler Colonialism, and Grounded Solidarities 193
	Ecological Popular Sovereignty and the Undoing of Its Imperial Avatar 198
	Bibliography 207
	Index 229