

SHIPS EMPLOYED IN THE SOUTH SEAS TRADE 1775–1861

Volume II

by A.G.E. JONES

In 1986 John Cumpston's Roebuck Society published the first volume (380 pages) of these lists. Volume II (740 pages) comprises three parts:

- A detailed list of ships
- Admiralty Protections from Impressment 1770–1810, with the names of ships, masters, harpooners, line-coilers, and boat-steerers
- Two dozen essays on different aspects, maritime and commercial, of the trade.

Volume II of this important work has already received glowing praise from experts in the fields of maritime history, the whaling trade, and the commercial aspects of the British Empire. The author, A.G.E. Jones, is an recognised authority in these important areas of study and research.

BELHAVEN/SPRI POLAR RESEARCH SERIES

Published by Belhaven Press in association with the Scott Polar Research Institute

Satellite remote sensing of polar regions

Robert A. Massom

This volume describes the capture, processing, and use of images taken from satellites of the polar regions and their applications to the study of ice and snow, and of high-latitude meteorological, biological, and oceanic variables. It also provides a reference manual for all satellites from 1960. 288 pages, illustrated, hardback. ISBN 1-85293-179-5. £39.50

Arctic homeland: kinship, community and development in northwest Greenland

Mark Nuttall

The Inuit of Greenland are a traditional people whose way of life and culture are under threat both from external pressures of 'development' and internal challenges to social cohesion. This study, based on extensive field research, examines the anthropology of the Inuit, the nature of their culture, their relationships with their meagre resource base, and their responses to change. A rich and vivid portrait of a little-known people. 196 pages, illustrated, hardback. ISBN 1-85293-225-2. £39.50.

The myth of the explorer: the press, sensationalism, and geographical discovery

Beau Riffenburgh

Concentrating on the 'Golden Age' of exploration between 1855 and 1910, this book examines how the Anglo-American press created the popular cult of the explorer, and how the insatiable appetite for adventure led to sometimes shabby actions as well as genuine bravery and scientific research. Based on extensive original research, the book reassesses many (not only polar) explorers' reputations and makes intriguing links between popular culture, the growth of science, imperialism, and the role of the press. 226 pages, illustrated, hardback. ISBN 1-85293-260-0. £39.50.

ARCTIC AND ALPINE RESEARCH

INSTITUTE OF ARCTIC AND ALPINE RESEARCH · UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO AT BOULDER

Editor: John T. Andrews

Managing Editor: Kathleen A. Salzberg

Arctic and Alpine Research is a quarterly international journal, now in its twenty-sixth year. It publishes original research papers, shorter contributions, correspondence, book reviews, and miscellaneous items of information. The subject matter deals with any scientific or cultural aspect of arctic and alpine environments and related topics on subarctic, subalpine, antarctic, subantarctic, and paleoenvironments. Papers are uni- or multidisciplinary but have interdisciplinary appeal. Symposia proceedings and monographs are also published from time to time, including the proceedings of the Comité Arctique International Seventh Conference, Reykjavik, Iceland, September 1986: Restoration and Succession in Circumpolar Arctic Lands (Vol. 19, No. 4, 1987), and Circumpolar Ecosystems in Winter, Churchill, Manitoba, February 1990 (Vol. 23, No. 1, 1991). Back issues are usually available.

Recent issues have included papers on the following topics: Avalanche-impact landforms; bog landforms and permafrost; climate change; glaciology; Holocene environments; treeline stability and variation; plant distribution; restoration.

Manuscripts in English should be submitted to the Managing Editor. Please write for instructions.

Meteorological Applications

Published for the Royal Meteorological Society

Meteorological Applications is an exciting new journal devoted to publishing material describing the different applications of meteorology, with particular emphasis on developments within Europe.

In recent years there has been a lot of activity devoted to developing the quality and range of meteorological services provided to a wide range of customers. This has required meteorologists to become increasingly aware of the needs of the users of the information, and for users to have a greater understanding of the services.

Meteorological Applications aims to encourage this flow of information between providers and users.
