The North American Conference on British Studies

The Journal of British Studies, founded in 1961, is published by the University of Chicago Press under the auspices of the North American Conference on British Studies (NACBS). It was the result of the imaginative generosity of a Trinity College alumnus, Frederick E. Hasler (Hon. LL.D. 1957), who contributed funds to the college for the specific purpose of establishing a learned periodical in the field of British history.

The North American Conference on British Studies is a scholarly society affiliated with the American Historical Association and open to anyone in the United States and Canada interested in British civilization in its several aspects: historical, archaeological, literary, artistic, political, and sociological. Its North American constituency comprises about eight hundred members drawn from the fifty states and ten provinces. Affiliated with the parent organization are seven regional conferences (New England, Middle Atlantic, South, Midwest, Western, Pacific Coast, and Northwest) each having its own offices and programs and with a combined membership of more than two thousand. The Conference convenes at least once a year in the autumn, usually in joint session with one of its regional affiliates. It seeks to encourage the serious study of British history, literature, and politics, as well as allied subjects, and among the general reading public through meetings, book prizes, and association with likeminded organizations in North America and Britain and through its publication program.

The Conference sponsors a wide variety of publications. Another journal, Albion, issued four times a year at Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina, and sent to all members of the parent organization, includes articles, proceedings of all meetings, and book reviews. The Conference’s newsletter, the British Studies Intelligencer, also sent to members, is published at Georgetown University, and contains notices of meetings devoted to British studies, news of appointments, moves, and retirements, and notes on current publications and research in progress. Other publications appear periodically and will be noted at such times.

The Conference awards the following book prizes: the British Council Prize in the Humanities ($750), awarded through an annual grant by the British Embassy, Washington, D.C., in association with the British Council in the United Kingdom, and given to the best book published in the preceding year by a North American scholar on any aspect of British studies; the John Ben Snow Prize in History and the Social Sciences ($750), made possible by an annual grant from the Snow Foundation and given for a book in British history, politics, economics, or the history of ideas; and the Walter D. Love Memorial Prize ($150) for the best scholarly article in any field of British history. Nominations for any of these prizes may be made to the Executive Secretary of the NACBS, Professor Anthony Brundage, Department of History, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, California 91768. Authors must be residents of Canada or the United States, but their work may appear either in North America or abroad.

Information about membership in the NACBS can be found on the copyright page of this journal.
The Decline and Fall of the British Aristocracy
David Cannadine

Written with style, verve, and wit by one of the leading social historians of our time, this masterly book is the first serious and sustained attempt to study the remarkable history of how the British aristocracy lost their wealth, power, and prestige during the last century. 80 illus. $35.00

Edmund Blunden
A Biography
Barry Webb

The first biography of Edmund Blunden (1896-1974), one of the most prodigious literary talents of Britain in the twentieth century. Writing with the full cooperation of Blunden’s family, and drawing from many thousands of Blunden’s letters, diaries, and other personal papers as well as from interviews with friends and colleagues, Barry Webb captures the man, his full career, and the literary environment in which he lived. 24 illus. $35.00

Yeats and the Poetry of Death
Elegy, Self-Elegy, and the Sublime
Jahan Ramazani

“Man has created death,” Yeats wrote, and in Jahan Ramazani’s view the effort to create and recreate death is the major impulse of his finest poems. In the first book to argue for the crucial importance of death in Yeats’s work, Ramazani reviews Yeats’s elegies, his self-elegies, and his poems in the sublime mode, balancing genre criticism with close revisionist readings of individual poems.

“A first-rate contribution to our general understanding of Yeats’s work.”—Eleanor Cook $21.50

Coping With City Growth During the British Industrial Revolution

Jeffrey G. Williamson

Coping With City Growth assesses British performance with city growth during the First Industrial Revolution by combining the tools used by Third World analysts with the archival attention and eclectic style of the economic historian. What emerges is an exciting and provocative new account of a very old problem. The debate over Third World city growth is hardly new, and can be found in the British Parliamentary Papers as early as the 1830s, in treatises by political economists, and in the British Press.

This major new journal covers all aspects of British history in the twentieth century, drawing together the different branches of historical scholarship and work in all related disciplines. One purpose of the journal is to foster the study of patterns of historical change and continuity. Equally the journal will publish articles which examine British experience within a comparative framework, whether that is European, American, or Australian.

In addition to original articles there are major review articles, shorter reviews, archive surveys, and reports on work in progress.

A selection of articles from volume one:

- Michael Freeden: Ideas and Politics in Britain
- Charles Webster: Conflict and Consensus: Explaining the British Health Service
- Sir Alec Cairncross: Reflections on Economic Ideas and Government

Tractates and Sermons
Richard Hooker
The Folger Library
Edition of the Works of Richard Hooker,
Volume 5
W. Speed Hill, General Editor

Although Richard Hooker, sixteenth-century England’s most provocative theologian, is known principally as the author of the Laws of Ecclesiastical Polity, in his lifetime, the Tractates and Sermons brought him greater notoriety. His views on justification, the perseverance of faith and the relationship of the Church of Rome to the reformed Church of England were extensively circulated. With this full-scale edition, the contemporary impact of these debates and the unique perspective they provide on late Elizabethan theology can be appreciated for the first time.

"Volumes worthy to stand next to the other great monuments of modern editing of English Renaissance literature." —Queen’s Quarterly

The Rise of Respectable Society
A Social History of Victorian Britain, 1830-1900
F.M.L. Thompson

"This is a major study of Victorian society by one of our leading historians, the product of immensely wide reading and mature consideration. It offers a synthesis of the mass of new research material... Each chapter is an excellent, authoritative and elegant résumé, and will be invaluable to the student and of much interest to what used to be called the intelligent lay reader."

The Sinews of Power
War, Money and the English State, 1688-1783
John Brewer

This brilliant analysis of eighteenth-century Britain shows how the nation emerged as a major international power and shows how the drastic increase in its military involvement in Europe and the expansion of her commercial and imperial interests would not have happened without a concurrent radical increase in taxation, a surge in deficit financing, and the growth of public administration.

Tragedies of Tyrants
Political Thought and Theater in the English Renaissance
By REBECCA W. BUSHNELL. Bushnell here explores the image of the tyrant in English Renaissance drama in light of the traditional opposition between the "proper" king and the unstable, effeminate, and histrionic tyrant found so often in Western political treatises. $29.95

Rule of Darkness
British Literature and Imperialism, 1830–1914
By PATRICK BRANTLINGER. New in Paper! "This learned and incisive study shows how deeply imperialist assumptions pervade Victorian narratives."—Virginia Quarterly Review. $29.95 cloth, $10.95 paper

A Happier Eden
The Politics of Marriage in the Stuart Epithalamium
By HEATHER DUBROW. Dubrow maps the largely unexplored terrain of the Stuart wedding poem, focusing in particular on the complex attitudes toward marriage it reflects. $32.50

Women and Romance
The Consolations of Gender in the English Novel
By LAURIE LANGBAUER. Langbauer maintains that the categories of women and romance are so defined in the novel as to permit the male order to seem independent of, or in control of, power relations, with romance the consolation of the powerless female. Reading Women Writing. $35.00 cloth, $10.95 paper
