The Political Unconscious

Narrative as a Socially Symbolic Act

By FREDRIC JAMESON

"Fredric Jameson is the best Marxist critic writing today, possibly the best social-historically oriented critic of our time. It seems impossible for him to write anything that is not illuminating in an original way. There is no cant, no cliché, no jargon in his work, only sustained dialectical reflection . . . The Political Unconscious is a major work."—Hayden White

"This is a distinguished book by perhaps the major American Marxist literary critic . . . The book is sure to be a landmark in the consideration of 'narrative as a socially symbolic act,' to cite Jameson's own subtitle."—J. Hillis Miller

"His book is exemplary not just for those who are interested in Marxist criticism as such but for all who are dissatisfied with formalism and seek alternative modes of argument."

Fictive Discourse and the Structures of Literature

By FÉLIX MARTÍNEZ-BONATI

Translated by Philip W. Silver

This major contribution in the area of literary theory considers a number of contemporary critical theories without wholly subscribing to any one of them, and in many ways goes beyond the explorations of structuralism and post-structuralism. This edition contains a preface and three new chapters specifically addressed to English-speaking readers. $15.00
