The North American Conference on British Studies

The Journal of British Studies, founded in 1961, is published by the University of Chicago Press under the auspices of the North American Conference on British Studies (NACBS). It was the result of the imaginative generosity of a Trinity College alumnus, Frederick E. Hasler (Hon. LL.D. 1957), who contributed funds to the college for the specific purpose of establishing a learned periodical in the field of British history.

The North American Conference on British Studies is a scholarly society affiliated with the American Historical Association and open to anyone in the United States and Canada interested in British civilization in its several aspects: historical, archaeological, literary, artistic, political, and sociological. Its North American constituency comprises about eight hundred members drawn from the fifty states and ten provinces. Affiliated with the parent organization are seven regional conferences (Northeastern, Middle Atlantic, South, Midwest, Western, Pacific Coast, and Northwest), each having its own officers and programs and with a combined membership of more than two thousand. The Conference convenes at least once a year in the autumn, usually in joint session with one of its regional affiliates. It seeks to encourage the serious study of British history, literature, and politics, as well as allied subjects, and among the general reading public through meetings, book prizes, and association with like-minded organizations in North America and Britain and through its publication program.

The Conference sponsors a wide variety of publications. Another journal, Albion, issued four times a year at Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina, and sent to all members of the parent organization, includes articles, proceedings of all meetings, and book reviews. The Conference’s newsletter, the British Studies Inteligator, also sent to members, is published at the University of Arizona and contains notices of meetings devoted to British studies, news of appointments, moves, and retirements and notes on current publications and research in progress. Other publications appear periodically and will be noted at such times.

Information about membership in the NACBS can be found on the copyright page of this journal.

JULIE ELLISON

CATO’S TEARS AND
THE MAKING OF
ANGLO-AMERICAN EMOTION

“Why do we like men who cry? In Cato’s Tears, her new study of ‘the politics of emotion’ in English and American literature and culture from the late seventeenth to the early nineteenth century, Julie Ellison argues that the spectacle of heroic male grief is crucial to the modern democratic imagination. This startlingly original book—on gender and sensibility, stoicism and its discontents—is both a brilliant foray into the history of sentiment and an illuminating commentary on the role of emotion in contemporary civic life.”—Terry Castle, Stanford University

The Journal of Modern History

For seventy years the leading North American forum for scholars of European history.

Celebrating seven decades in print, the Journal of Modern History is recognized as the leading American journal for the study of European intellectual, political, and cultural history. The journal’s geographical and temporal sweep—Europe, including Russia and the Balkans, since the Renaissance—makes it unique in its field. The JMH provides the latest research on events and movements in specific countries as well as investigations of broader themes that transcend particular times and places.

Smile of Discontent
Humor, Gender, and Nineteenth-Century British Fiction
EILEEN GILLOOLY
“This is an important and original book. Gillooly’s distinctive achievement is to recover the purpose and the strength of subdued mockery—to chart the indirections that have eluded others and thereby to find directions out. Fresh, responsible, and well-written.”—Bruce Redford, Boston University

BARBARA T. GATES
“In one eye-opening profile after another, Gates presents the lives and achievements of such gifted pioneers as the expert fossil collector Mary Anning, the botanical artist Marianne North, and the mycologist Beatrix Potter, who, frustrated by the repeated rejections of the male scientific establishment, turned to creating her beloved children’s books.”—Booklist

Liberalism and Empire
A Study in Nineteenth-Century British Liberal Thought
UDAY SINGH MEHTA
“Mehta’s achievement is first to demonstrate that there are analytically reconstructable elements in the grand liberal tradition that purport to justify colonial rule, and then to show how exactly these elements needed to be opposed in order to construct an alternative liberalism. This manifestly thoughtful and carefully worked out book is so successful in its argument that its heroes and villains are discussed in mutually illuminating detail without the distracting ideological rhetoric so often found in this heated subject.”—Akeel Bilgrami, Johnsonian Professor of Philosophy at Columbia University and author of Belief and Meaning

“Edney’s account of British surveying and mapping on the subcontinent shows how mapping defined more than a British India; it defined the British as well. . . . Edney shows, in detail, how technologies go into the world umbilically linked to the problems that bore them, swaddled in the social institutions that deploy them.”—D. ENGLISH TRADER, INDIAN MAID
Representing Gender, Race, and Slavery in the New World:
An Inkle and Yarico Reader
edited by Frank Felsenstein

On March 13, 1711, an article appeared in The Spectator about Thomas Inkle, a young English trader cast ashore in the Americas, who is saved from violent death by Yarico, a beautiful Indian maiden. When he and Yarico become lovers, Inkle promises to clothe her in silks when he returns with her to England. Some months later, they are picked up after Yarico succeeds in signaling a passing English ship. But upon reaching Barbados, Inkle immediately sells Yarico into slavery—raising the price he demands when he learns that Yarico is pregnant with his-child.

Frank Felsenstein has assembled the main English versions of this once-famous story, restoring the tale of Inkle and Yarico to its rightful place as a focal narrative in cultural and historical debate of issues of gender, race, and colonialism.

ROMANTICISM AND COLONIAL DISEASE
Alan Bewell

“A strikingly original and exhaustively-documented study of British romanticism in relation to the global epidemiological crisis prompted by European imperialism. Alan Bewell’s book represents a breakthrough in understanding the nexus connecting literature, colonialism, and medicine in romantic culture.”—Nigel Leask, Cambridge University

BODIES OF EVIDENCE
Medicine and the Politics of the English Inquest, 1830–1926
Ian A. Burney

“Burney’s account not only exposes the ‘poor man’s court’ as an early nineteenth-century invention, but reveals it as one in which experts needed to be seen to act with a degree of transparency in order to gain public legitimacy. His analysis of the inquest beautifully illustrates fundamental tensions and ambiguities inherent in the formation of modern democratic states. Yet in mapping the boundaries that came to be drawn between popular and esoteric understandings of the inquest—indeed, the boundaries between the dead and the living—Burney sacrifices none of the intrinsic fascination of this most peculiar of English institutions. As accessible as it is acute, Bodies of Evidence is a model of modern historical scholarship.”—Roger Cooter
