DONALD ALEXANDER SANGSTER BLAIR, formerly Consultant Psychiatrist, St. Bernard's Hospital, Southall

Donald Blair was born in Paisley, Scotland on 20 June 1906. He died, after a brief illness on 12 November 1988.

His father was a general practitioner who moved with his family to South Africa for reasons of health when Donald was a few years old. He attended a preparatory school in South Africa before entering Epsom College. From there he gained a de Havilland scholarship to Clare College, Cambridge, and, after completing his pre-medical studies, went on to St

Thomas's Hospital, qualifying in 1930. In 1937 he gained his DPM from London University and in 1940 received the MA, MD degrees from Cambridge University. In 1971 he was elected a Foundation Fellow of the Royal College of Psychiatrists. In the same year he obtained the Diploma in Medical Jurisprudence of the London Society of Apothecaries.

After three years in a variety of junior surgical and medical posts he became Assistant Medical Officer at Banstead Hospital in February 1935, and from then on specialised in psychiatry. During the war years he became a psychiatric consultant in the RAMC with the rank of Major, serving in various establishments in this country and in France, attached to the 75th General Hospital.
