

- intermediate events, with discharge from hospital as an example. Epidemiology 1993;4:120-127.
28. Garibaldi RA, Cushing D, Lerer T. Risk factors for postoperative infection. Am J Med 1991;91(3B):158S-162S.
29. Simchen E, Wax Y, Pevsner B, et al. The Israeli study of surgical infections (ISSI), I: methods for developing a standardized surveillance system for a multicenter study of surgical infections. Infect Control Hosp Epidemiol 1988;9:232-240.
30. Haley RW. The vicissitudes of prospective multihospital surveillance studies: the Israeli study of surgical infections. Infect Control Hosp Epidemiol 1988;9:228-231.
31. Hierholzer WJ. Health care data, the epidemiologist's sand: comments on the quantity and quality of data. Am J Med 1991;91(suppl 3B):21S-26S.

CDC Issues Draft Guideline for Prevention of Nosocomial Pneumonia

The draft "Guideline for Prevention of Nosocomial Pneumonia," prepared by the Hospital Infection Control Practices Advisory Committee (HICPAC) and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), was published for public review and comment in the Federal Register on February 2, 1994.

Written comments about the Guideline should be addressed to Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Attention: Pneumonia Guideline Information Centers, Mailstop A-07, 1600 Clifton Rd. NE, Atlanta, GA 30333. Closing date for receipt of comments is April 4, 1994.

To purchase a copy ($4.50 per copy) of the Federal Register, contact the U.S. Government Printing Office, Order and Information Desk, Washington, DC 20402-9329; telephone (212) 783-3238. Give the date of publication and stock number 069-001-000-70-0. Copies are available for viewing and photocopying at some public and academic libraries and at any library designated as a U.S. Government Depository Library (for locations, call [212] 783-3238).

For further information about the draft Guideline, call (404) 332-2569.