Nominee – 2015 Kirkus Prize in Nonfiction

“How has the exclusion of the female half of this country damaged U.S. foreign policy? Let me count the ways — from ignoring a North Vietnamese peace initiative because it was headed by a woman to excluding the violence against females that is the normalizer of all violence. This country is fighting poisonous growths, yet leaving their roots intact. From now on, no debate about national or global policy can proceed without reading The Hillary Doctrine by Valerie Hudson and Patricia Leidl. It is the first book about high level efforts to create a foreign policy as if women mattered.”

—Gloria Steinem

“Thoughtful and nuanced... I highly recommend [The Hillary Doctrine] to anybody interested in elevating women’s voices in world affairs, as well as the practicalities of day-to-day U.S. foreign policymaking.”

—Micah Zenko, Newsweek

“Highly relevant.” —Gideon Rachman, Financial Times

“I recommend it.” —Nicholas Kristof, The New York Times
ARTICLES
Religious Power, the State, Women’s Rights, and Family Law
Mala Htun and S. Laurel Weldon 451
Women and Postconflict Security: A Study of Police Response to Domestic Violence in Liberia
Peace A. Medie 478
Risk Aversion, Gender, and Constitutional Change
Tania Verge, Marc Guinjoan and Toni Rodon 499
Humility, Autonomy, and Birth as a Site of Politics
Sara Rushing 522

CRITICAL PERSPECTIVES ON GENDER AND POLITICS
Introduction 550
Jean Elshtain, Defender of the Family
Jane Mansbridge 550
Jane Addams as Feminist Heroine: Democracy and Contentious Politics
Nancy J. Hirschmann 554
Public Man/Private Woman in Context
Arlene W. Saxonhouse 561
Jean Elshtain on Families and Politics
Martha Ackelsberg and Mary Lyndon Shanley 570
Jean Elshtain: Why Augustine and Arendt?
Joanna Vecchiarelli Scott 578
Contending with Women and War
Christine Sylvester 586

BOOK REVIEWS 596