Paul Guggenheim Prize

To be awarded in 2001

The Paul Guggenheim Prize, awarded every two years, aims to encourage young academics in the field of international law.

The Paul Guggenheim Prize, amounting to 12.000.- Swiss francs, will be awarded to a monograph of major importance in the field of public international law (except European law). The monograph must be of highest quality and be the work of a young author at the beginning of his/her career. Works submitted may be in the form of published books or of manuscripts intended for publication; they may be written in English, French, German, Italian or Spanish. Works that have already been awarded a prize of a similar nature will not be considered.

Applications should be accompanied by a curriculum vitae, a list of publications and five copies of the work submitted. This information must arrive no later than 1 February 2001 at the following address:

*The Guggenheim Foundation,
The Graduate Institute of International Studies,
11A, avenue de la Paix,
1202 Geneva (Switzerland)*

Applicants are required to specify whether the work submitted has already been awarded a prize.

The Regulations pertaining to the Prize may be obtained at the same address.

International Corporate Law Bulletin

Edited by: Jason D. Haines, Research Fellow in Corporate and Financial Services Law, Institute of Advanced Legal Studies, University of London

Assistant Editor: Peter Gray, Research Officer, IALS, UK

Corporate enterprises, in their various forms, constitute the engines of economic and financial development, and therefore the rules relating to their establishment, governance, operation and cessation are of vital importance to all those who deal directly or indirectly with business and the financial world, as well as to their professional advisers. With the development of new market based economies around the world, the ever increasing tendency to internationalisation of trade, the emergence of a global and highly interrelated world economy and significant developments due to technology and other factors, and the ways of conducting business, it is hardly surprising that there is a constant stream of new laws and regulatory obligations, which affect all those who are engaged, directly or indirectly, in commerce and finance. Knowledge and understanding of these developments is not only necessary for efficiency, but is a prerequisite for those who wish to advise their commercial and financial clients properly and professionally. Furthermore, there is a tendency for such new laws and regulations to place legal obligations of due diligence and probity directly on those who facilitate and advise upon other people's business.

Given the significance of this ever changing body of law, a worldwide network of specialists has been brought together by the Centre for Corporate Law and Practice of the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies, in London, to provide a unique service through the International Corporate Law Bulletin. The Bulletin carries authoritative information on developments in substantive corporate law and practice, together with other areas of the law, related to the creation, operation and dissolution of corporate enterprises. Therefore, topical information on areas such as financial services regulation, banking, insolvency, employment, and public law will be available alongside informed comment on corporate law.

As a regular source of practical information and insight, the Bulletin enables lawyers, business people, and financial executives to make sound and confident decisions based upon the latest developments in international corporate law.

The Italian Yearbook of International Law

Volume IX 1999

Edited by: Benedetto Conforti, Luigi Ferrari Bravo, Francesco Francioni, Natalino Ronzitti and Giorgio Sacerdoti

In a world where diversity and pluralism are indispensable values for the balanced progress of international law, knowledge of the contribution that each State makes to the formation and development of international norms is increasingly important for both scholars and practitioners.

The Italian Yearbook of International Law aims at making accessible to the English speaking public the Italian contribution to the practice and literature of international law. The volume is organised in three main sections.

The first contains doctrinal contributions featuring the following:

- articles on the European human rights system and its relation to customary international law
- international control of bribery and mergers
- the problem of accountability for gross violations of human rights.

The second section covers the Italian practice in the following areas:

- judicial decisions (including the important decisions in the Ocalan and Cermis cases)
- diplomatic and parliamentary practice
- treaty practice
- national legislation

The third part of the volume contains a systematic bibliographical index of Italian literature in the field of international law.

The volume ends with an analytical index for ready consultation.

Relevant materials are presented by way of introductory notes and concise legal analysis.
