The North American Conference on British Studies

_The Journal of British Studies_, founded in 1961, is published by the University of Chicago Press under the auspices of the North American Conference on British Studies (NACBS). It was the result of the imaginative generosity of a Trinity College alumnus, Frederick E. Hasler (Hon. LL.D. 1957), who contributed funds to the college for the specific purpose of establishing a learned periodical in the field of British history.

The North American Conference on British Studies is a scholarly society affiliated with the American Historical Association and open to anyone in the United States and Canada interested in British civilization in its several aspects: historical, archaeological, literary, artistic, political, and sociological. Its North American constituency comprises about eight hundred members drawn from the fifty states and ten provinces. Affiliated with the parent organization are seven regional conferences (New England, Middle Atlantic, South, Midwest, Western, Pacific Coast, and Northwest), each having its own offices and programs and with a combined membership of more than two thousand. The Conference convenes at least once a year in the autumn, usually in joint session with one of its regional affiliates. It seeks to encourage the serious study of British history, literature, and politics, as well as allied subjects, and among the general reading public through meetings, book prizes, and association with likeminded organizations in North America and Britain and through its publications program.

The Conference sponsors a wide variety of publications. Another journal, _Albion_, issued four times a year at Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina, and sent to all members of the parent organization, includes articles, proceedings of all meetings, and book reviews. The Conference’s newsletter, the _British Studies Intelligencer_, also sent to members, is published at the University of California, Irvine, and contains notices of meetings devoted to British studies, news of appointments, moves, and retirements, and notes on current publications and research in progress. Other publications appear periodically and will be noted at such times.

The Conference awards the following book prizes: the British Council Prize in the Humanities ($750), awarded through an annual grant by the British Embassy, Washington, D.C., in association with the British Council in the United Kingdom, and given to the best book published in the preceding year by a North American scholar in any aspect of British studies; the John Ben Snow Prize in History and the Social Sciences ($750), made possible by an annual grant from the Snow Foundation and given for a book in British history, politics, economics, or the history of ideas; and the Walter D. Love Memorial Prize ($150) for the best scholarly article in any field of British history. Nominations for any of these prizes may be made to the Executive Secretary of the NACBS, Professor Lois G. Schoeuer, Department of History, George Washington University. Authors must be residents of Canada or the United States, but their work may appear either in North America or abroad.

Information about membership in the NACBS can be found on the copyright page of this journal.

Archetypes and Ancestors
Palaeontology in Victorian London, 1850–1875
Adrian Desmond
This lively book recreates the intellectual ferment and feuding among paleontologists in London around the time of publication of Darwin’s Origin. "A first rate work... Desmonds has done a masterful job of documenting and describing the ways in which scientific interpretations and ideas are an outgrowth of socio-economic conditions and cultural norms. As such his work can serve as an exemplar for future studies."

Religion, Order, and Law
A Study of Pre-Revolutionary England
With a new Preface
David Little
Foreword by Robert N. Bellah
One of the most esteemed scholars in the field of religious ethics reexamines and extends the argument of Max Weber's The Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Capitalism in light of recent critiques of that work. Little focuses on religious and legal developments in the late sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries in England, a period Weber himself did not extensively examine. "This is a landmark in the study of the complex and varying relations between religion and society." — James Luther Adams, Professor Emeritus, Harvard Divinity School

No Longer an Island
Britain and the Wright Brothers, 1902-1909
ALFRED GOLLIN
No government paid more attention to the early activities of the Wright Brothers than the British, but British negotiations with the Wrights present a record of lost opportunities, mingled with ineptness and duplicity. The fascinating story includes a bungling British spy, an attempt by the cofounder of the Rolls-Royce motor car company to steal the Wrights’ technical secrets, the breaking off of negotiations in 1909 by Britain’s Secretary of State for War (who was banking on receiving the purloined secrets), and high-level infighting by such eminent figures as Winston Churchill, Lloyd George, Admiral Fisher, General Haig, and Lord Northcliffe. $35.00

Methodism and Politics in British Society, 1750-1850
DAVID HEMPTON
This book provides a detailed assessment of the role and influence of Methodism on British politics, society, and culture between 1750 and 1850. It shows how social and political tensions were translated into religious forms, and how popular religious aspirations helped to change the face of British society. Although the primary context is political, Methodism is also located in the context of European pietism, Enlightenment thought, 18th-century popular culture, and John Wesley’s own theological and political opinions. The Irish dimension of Methodism is brought to the fore, showing how the considerable stake in Irish protestant missions brought Methodism into conflict with Catholicism. $27.00
