The Political Relevance of Christianity

David McLellan

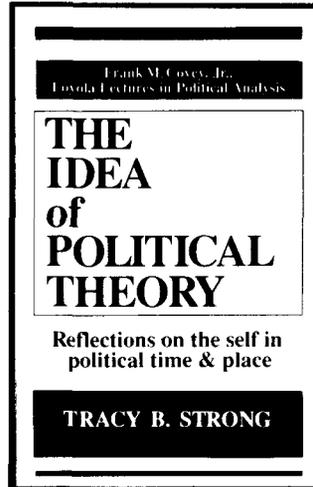

In this brief, provocative book, David McLellan presents case studies of Simone Weil, Reinhold Niebuhr, liberation theology, and the Green movement to demonstrate the intimate connection between politics and the Christian religion, arguing that such a connection is both inevitable and desirable. $19.95 cloth

The Idea of Political Theory

Reflections on the Self in Political Time and Place

Tracy B. Strong

"Readers will discover that the points which provoke disagreement are often the most stimulating. Strong's book, whatever attitude one takes to his conclusions, demonstrates the compelling character of its intellectual claims."—Ethics $28.95 cloth
