Marc Landy and Sidney Milkis present American politics as a dramatic narrative of conflict and change, adopting an American Political Development approach to show the whole gamut of attitudes, behaviors, organizational activities, and institutional relationships that constitute American political and governmental life. The authors strongly emphasize how the two key political development principles of path dependency and critical choice are central to explaining how and why the past affects the present and future.

Major Features
• Authors explain how ideas come to shape concrete policies and institutions and to shape political movements.
• Themes of path dependency and critical choice illustrate why institutions and policies perpetuate themselves and why they change.
• The narrative style helps students fully engage in the material.
• Chapter-opening vignettes provide contemporary context for the key theme(s) of the chapter.

New to This Edition
• The text was updated throughout and its tone is now more even and objective.
• The content was streamlined to make it more focused and less dense.
• Historical developments drive the discussions and key analytic arguments of the chapter, helping reader to understand the present.
• Each chapter now presents a contemporary portrait at the beginning of the chapter to develop a fuller context for the chapter discussion(s).
• A new concluding chapter takes America’s most enduring principle, the American Creed, enunciated in the Declaration of Independence, and discusses how and why it remains seminal to American political life.

INSTRUCTIONS TO CONTRIBUTORS

Submitted articles: Authors should upload their manuscripts (double spaced) to the SAPD online submissions system at http://www.editorialmanager.com/SAPD. Please note that SAPD will no longer accept manuscript submissions by regular mail.

Preparation of manuscript: A separate title page should be prepared including all the full article title, short title for use as a running head, author’s full name and affiliation, and complete contact information (including phone number and e-mail address).

Manuscripts should conform to Chicago style (see below for examples concerning preparation of reference and note material). The entire manuscript (including notes and references) should be typed double-spaced, with at least 1 inch wide margins for coping with margins. The manuscript should be submitted with elements arranged in the following order: (1) title page, (2) article text, (3) endnotes, (4) bibliography (optional), (5) appendices/tables, and (6) figures, placement of tables or figures should be cited in the text. The publisher will be responsible for placing artwork, tables or figures, as well as converting endnotes to footnotes.

Figures: Appendices, tables, and figures should be numbered consecutively throughout the article and should be included on separate pages preceding the reference section. Table and figure images should also be uploaded as separate files. Figures should be ready for photocopying; they cannot be redrawn by the publisher. Charts, graphs, or other artwork should be professionally rendered, or computer generated.

References and notes: References and notes should conform to the examples given here. For other cases, please refer to The Chicago Manual of Style. Author’s acknowledgments or other personal notes will appear as an unnumbered note at the foot of the title page. Notes should be double-spaced and placed at the end of the essay, not at the foot of the page. Notes should be numbered consecutively throughout the article. Numbered notes should appear at the end of the sentence. If multiple texts are cited in a sentence they should appear as one consolidated note at the end of the sentence.

Examples of correct styling for references are as follows:

Books:
   - John D. Hicks, The Populist Revolt: A History of the Farmers’ Alliance and the People’s Party (Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 1931), 96-152.
   - Richard Bensel, Government, Cornell University
   - Brian Balogh, History, University of Virginia

Journal articles:

Conference papers:
   - Theodore J. Lowi, Government, Cornell University
   - Ira Katznelson, Political Science, Yale University

Appendices:
   - Notes should be numbered consecutively throughout the article.

Manuscript:
   - Articles in American Political Development is a semi-annual periodical which publishes theoretical and empirical research on political development and institutional change in the United States. A diversity of subject matters and methodologies is invited, including comparative or international studies that illuminate the American case. Manuscripts of up to 15 pages in length, excluding footnotes, will be considered. There is a “Notes” section for shorter presentation of research perspectives and findings. Also welcomed are review essays on bibliographies of unusual interest, and comments on previously published articles.

Copied writing:
   - The publisher reserves the right to copy and proofread all articles accepted for publication. The lead author will be asked to review the copyedited manuscript prior to typesetting. Page proofs of an article will be sent to the lead author for correction of typographical errors only. The author must notify the editorial office of any changes within 48 hours or approval will be assumed.

Copyright:
   - Original and copyright. To be considered for publication in Studies in American Political Development, a manuscript cannot have been published previously, nor can it be under review for publication elsewhere. Papers with multiple authors should be submitted with the assumption that all authors concur with its submission. A Copyright Transfer Agreement, with certain specified rights reserved by the author, must be signed and returned to the Editor by senior authors of accepted manuscripts, prior to publication.
