Soldiers, Writers and Statesmen of the English Revolution
Ian Gentles, John Morrill, and Blair Worden, Editors
This collection of essays about major aspects of the "English Revolution" of the mid-seventeenth century examines how it was fought (soldiers), how it was defended and argued over (writers), and how it was shaped and how it failed (statesmen). The essays are written by both established and younger scholars of the period in honor of Austyn Woolrych, founding Professor of History at the University of Lancaster and the author of many influential books and articles.

Sermons at Court
Politics and Religion in Elizabethan and Jacobean Preaching
Peter E. McCullough
This book describes preaching at the royal courts during the reigns of Elizabeth I and James I (1558-1625) and reconstructs the contexts—architectural, religious, political—in which the sermons were preached. The author presents new evidence of the competing royal religious patronage and reconceptualizes the careers of preachers such as Andrewes, Donne and Laud. The book is accompanied by a definitive calendar of court sermons for the period on diskette.

Richard Symonds's Diary of the Marches of the Royal Army
C.E. Long, Editor
Supplementary Introduction by Ian Roy, King's College, London
This diary of the English Civil War is the only first-hand account by a participant on the King's side who was not an officer. The diarist, Richard Symonds, was a royal Lifeguardsman for the crucial two years of 1644-5, which included the battle of Naseby and the Royalist defeat. This reissue with a new, informative introduction takes full account of the transformation of our knowledge of the diarist and the Civil War.

The Sense of the People
Politics, Culture and Imperialism in England, 1715-1785
Kathleen Wilson
"The book demonstrates, richly and convincingly, that an emergent culture of imperialism was connected to an 18th-century urban renaissance...this is an important study that will generate much debate among professional historians."

LOOKING AT EMPIRE

King Khama, Emperor Joe, and the Great White Queen
Victoria Britain through African Eyes
Neil Parsons

“In an account which frequently echoes those eighteenth-century satires on national characteristics, Neil Parsons has skilfully combined an extraordinary range of press reports and other archival materials to reconstruct day by day the uneasy encounter of two largely alien worlds. . . . For the light it throws on the prelude to the [Jameson] Raid, but above all for its portrayal of the awkwardness, naivety, range of prejudice and genuine sympathies experienced on all sides in the process of imperial exchange, this is a remarkable and unusual book.” Andrew Porter, Times Literary Supplement

Picturing Empire
Photography and the Visualization of the British Empire
James R. Ryan

“In this fascinating study of the ‘optics’ of Empire, Ryan provides an extensive and engaging account of the British Empire as a photographic text. Metaphoric allusions to the spectacle of power or the ‘eye’ of authority are now translated into an illuminating survey of Empire as a photographic project, and photography as an imperial endeavour.”—Homi K. Bhabha, University of Chicago

Maps and Politics
Jeremy Black

In the lively and well-illustrated Maps and Politics, Jeremy Black argues persuasively that the supposed “objectivity” of the map-making and map-using process cannot be divorced from aspects of the politics of representation.

“Historian Jeremy Black’s elegantly provocative critique of western cartography warrants the attention of anyone intrigued by the power and mystique of maps.”—Mark Monmonier, author of How to Lie with Maps, Second Edition

The Journal of Modern History

Founded in 1929, the Journal of Modern History is recognized as the leading American journal for the study of European intellectual, political, and cultural history. The journal's geographical and temporal sweep—the history of Europe, including Russia and the Balkans, since the Renaissance—makes it unique in its field. The JMH provides the latest research on events and movements in specific countries and current investigations on broader themes that transcend particular times and places.

Refiguring Revolutions
Aesthetics and Politics from the English Revolution to the Romantic Revolution
Kevin Sharpe and Steven N. Zwicker, Editors
This is an original and interdisciplinary reassessment of the cultural and political history of England from 1649 to 1789. "What is indeed striking is the degree to which the essays reveal a shared set of interests and adopt languages and concerns that reflect back and forth in stimulating ways." —Richard W. Kroll, author of The Material World

The Elevation of Novel Reading in Britain, 1684–1750
William B. Warner
Warner shows how the earliest novels in Britain provoked early instances of the modern anxiety about the effects of new media on consumers.
"This is an exciting and wholly original book: It is devilishly intelligent, formidable in its deployment of history and theory." —John Richetti, author of Popular Fiction before Richardson

Continuity and Change aims to define a field of historical sociology concerned with long-term continuities and discontinuities in the structures of past societies. Emphasis is upon studies whose agenda or methodology combines elements from traditional fields such as history, sociology, law, demography, economics or anthropology, or ranges freely between them. There is a strong commitment to comparative studies over a broad range of cultures and time spans.
