Antarctic Science provides a truly international forum for the broad spread of studies that increasingly characterize scientific research in the Antarctic. The journal attracts papers from all countries currently undertaking Antarctic research. Whilst emphasising interdisciplinary work, the journal publishes papers from environmental management to biodiversity, from volcanoes to icebergs, and from oceanography to the upper atmosphere. No other journal covers such a wide range of Antarctic scientific studies.

The Geological Magazine was originally established in 1844 and has been published continuously ever since. It covers the whole field of earth sciences, has a worldwide readership and has a particular strength in providing a niche for interdisciplinary publications. It is a journal of global standing. It publishes both original articles, rapid communications, discussions of papers which have already appeared in the Magazine, book reviews and a list of new publications. There are no page charges for papers published in the Magazine.
