RECENT PUBLICATIONS

THE AFRICAN LABOURER

By MAJOR G. ST. J. ORDE BROWNE, O.B.E. (Mil.)

17s. 6d. net

From the Foreword by LORD LUGARD:—

'If the treatment of the workers by the privileged classes may be taken as a true criterion of the ethical standard attained by a community, the treatment of African labour affords examples reaching from the era of slavery—when the labourer himself was a saleable commodity—to the spectacle of a standing International "Committee of Experts" engaged in drafting Conventions to govern the treatment of wage-labour by European employers.

It is with problems of this kind—of housing, diet, wages, the mutual obligations of employer and employed, the duration of contracts, the method of recruiting, habitation and repatriation, and the precautions needed to avoid the disintegration of native social life—that Major Orde Browne deals in the present book.'

CARAVANS OF THE OLD SAHARA

By E. W. BOVILL

21s. net

From the Preface:—

'In the commercial intercourse which so long existed between the maritime peoples of Southern Europe and the Muhammadan states of the North African littoral the ancient trade of Barbary with the negroid peoples of the Western Sudan was an important, but remains a little recognized, factor.

Not only did the rich trans-Saharan caravan traffic weave ties of blood and culture between the Sudan and the Mediterranean, but it inspired the achievements by which after centuries of disappointment the mysteries of the remote interior were revealed to Western eyes.

The purpose of this volume is to outline briefly the growth of these associations and to demonstrate the part which the Western Sudanese have played in the history of civilization.'

PRACTICAL PHONETICS FOR STUDENTS OF AFRICAN LANGUAGES

By DIEDRICH WESTERMANN AND IDA C. WARD

8s. 6d. net

From the Foreword by Professor DANIEL JONES:—

'[This book] is, I think, as perfect as a book of its kind can be. It is the result of a particularly happy collaboration between the leading exponent of practical African linguistics and one of our most eminent phoneticians; so readers may feel assured that the work is both technically sound and written with full knowledge of the practical educational problems which call for solution. . . . [It] will instruct the learner how to listen to the native and how to imitate his sounds with success. . . . He will then find that the task of learning to make the "difficult" African sounds becomes relatively easy, and that he need no longer content himself with rough approximations to the native pronunciation.'
