

CORRIGENDUM

Driving Irritation: Thailand’s Supreme Court and the English Roots of Corporate Criminal Liability – CORRIGENDUM

Lasse Schuldt

(First published online 9 January 2024)

<https://doi.org/10.1017/asjcl.2023.29>, Published by Cambridge University Press, 25 September 2023.

Keywords: Corporate criminal liability; Thailand; English law; legal irritation; path dependence; corrigendum

The author apologises for the following errors in the published article.

On page 142, incorrect funding information was included. This has now been removed from the published article.

On page 148 of the article, the word ‘English’ was included in the sentence:

“This mode of establishment was used until the entry into force of the English Act on Partnerships and Companies 1911, which introduced simple registration.”

But the sentence should have read as follows:

“This mode of establishment was used until the entry into force of the Siamese Act on Partnerships and Companies 1911, which introduced simple registration.”

Reference

Schuldt L (2023). Driving Irritation: Thailand’s Supreme Court and the English Roots of Corporate Criminal Liability. Asian Journal of Comparative Law. Published by Cambridge University Press, 25 September 2023. doi: 10.1017/asjcl.2023.29

Cite this article: Schuldt L (2024). Driving Irritation: Thailand’s Supreme Court and the English Roots of Corporate Criminal Liability – CORRIGENDUM. Asian Journal of Comparative Law 19, 159–159. <https://doi.org/10.1017/asjcl.2023.36>

© The Author(s), 2024. Published by Cambridge University Press on behalf of the National University of Singapore