JOSHUA RIFKIN writes:

Two slips – one of them my doing – mar my essay ‘Blinding Us with Science? Man, Machine and the Mass in B Minor’ as it appeared in Eighteenth-Century Music 8/1 (2011), 77–91. In note 3 a cross-reference failed to get inserted; for ‘page 000’ readers should substitute ‘pages 88–89’. In Example 1 the first note in each of the first two staves should read c♯2 rather than b♯1, as some will have no doubt recognized from Figures 3–6; I provide an amended version below. For the record, both items appear correctly in the online reprint of the article in Understanding Bach 5 (2010), 49–63 <www.bachnetwork.co.uk/ub5/rifkin.pdf>.

I hope readers find these errors less painful than I do.

Example 1  ‘Confiteor’, bars 138–140, tenor
