

LEGAL THEORY

Legal Theory is a quarterly, peer-reviewed journal that is edited to the highest standards with the assistance of a prestigious international editorial board. Like other peer-reviewed journals, Legal Theory has an exclusive submission policy and will consider only manuscripts that have not been previously published and that are not being considered for publication elsewhere. Authors should, upon submission, confirm that their essays have not been previously published and are not undergoing review by another publication.

Legal Theory publishes work on a broad range of topics, including but not limited to analytical jurisprudence, normative jurisprudence, policy analyses of legal institutions and doctrines, theories of law as a social or cultural phenomenon, and critical perspectives on law and legal institutions. Although Legal Theory especially seeks articles that make a positive original contribution, submissions directly commenting on other works in the existing literature are welcome.

Anonymized articles should be submitted via ScholarOne at <https://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/leg>. Authors should not contact the editors directly about whether Legal Theory might be interested in their articles. Any queries relating to submissions should be sent to Managing Editor Mariam Kazanjian on mk.legaltheory@gmail.com.

Special issues may be considered in certain circumstances and any proposals should also go to Mariam Kazanjian.

Preparation of manuscript. A separate title page should be prepared including the article title, short title for use as a running head (not to exceed 45 characters), author's full name and affiliation, complete contact information (including phone number and e-mail address), and competing interests declaration.

The author competing interests declaration will be subject to editorial review and may be published in the article. Competing interests are situations that could be perceived to exert an undue influence on the content or publication of an author's work. They may include, but are not limited to, financial, professional, contractual or personal relationships or situations. If the manuscript has multiple authors, the author submitting must include competing interest declarations relevant to all contributing authors. Example wording for a declaration is as follows: "Competing interests: Author A is employed at company B. Author C owns shares in company D, is on the Board of company E and is a member of organisation F. Author G has received grants from company H." If no competing interests exist, the declaration should state "Competing interests: The author(s) declare none".

Manuscripts should be prepared for blind review by external reviewers, with any information that might identify the author removed. This includes:

- Any references or citations to the author's or co-author's published or unpublished work, including in the bibliography or reference list.

- Any acknowledgements, including footnotes thanking others for contributions made throughout the work.

Manuscripts should be submitted in Word and should conform to Chicago style (however, see below concerning preparation of reference and note material).

Legal Theory has a strong preference for manuscripts shorter than 15,000 words inclusive of notes. A separate abstract of no more than 150 words should be included. Short comments (4,500 words or less, excluding reference and note material) on articles that have appeared in Legal Theory will undergo expedited review by the editors, with additional external review where this is deemed necessary.

The entire manuscript (including notes and references) should be typed double-spaced with wide margins for copyediting. Manuscript pages should be numbered consecutively. Authors of accepted articles will be asked to prepare a final version in the journal's style.

References and notes. References and notes should use footnotes rather than endnotes and conform to The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation.

Pre-submission English-language editing. Authors, particularly those whose first language is not English, may wish to have their English-language manuscripts checked by a native speaker before submission. This is optional, but may help to ensure that the academic content of the paper is fully understood by the editor and any reviewers. Cambridge University Press offers a language-editing service in conjunction with a third-party provider American Journal Experts: www.cambridge.org/academic/author-services/ Please note that use of this service is voluntary, and at the author's own expense. Use of this service does not guarantee that the manuscript will be accepted for publication, nor does it restrict the author to submitting to a Cambridge published journal. Cambridge is providing this service in order to provide a convenient option for prospective authors, which comes with the reassurance that we have checked the quality of the provider, and will be continuously monitoring the quality of the service.

Figures. If the manuscript is accepted for publication, the author must provide figures that are ready for photographic reproduction; they cannot be redrawn by the publisher, unless the author pays for the cost of such work. Charts, graphs, or other artwork must be drawn by a professional artist or computer generated on a laser printer, in black ink on white paper, and should remain legible after a 50% reduction. All labels and details on figures should be clearly printed. Full information on how to prepare and supply figures, tables and graphics can be found here and should be followed with care.

Color. Charges apply for all color figures that appear in the print version of the journal. At the time of submission, contributors should clearly state whether their figures should appear in color in the online version only, or whether they should appear in color online and in the print version. There is no charge for including color figures in the online version of the Journal but it must be clear that color is needed to enhance the meaning of the figure, rather than simply being for aesthetic purposes. If you request color figures in the printed version, you will be contacted by CCC-Rightslink who are acting on our behalf to collect Author Charges. Please follow their instructions in order to avoid any delay in the publication of your article.

Copyright and submission conditions. Submitting an article to Legal Theory implies that it has not been published elsewhere and is not being considered for publication elsewhere.

The policy of Legal Theory is that authors (or in some cases their employers) retain copyright and grant Cambridge University Press a licence to publish their work. In the case of gold open access articles this is a non-exclusive licence. Authors must complete and return an author publishing agreement form as soon as their article has been accepted for publication; the journal is unable to publish without this. Please download the appropriate publishing agreement here.

For open access articles, the form also sets out the Creative Commons licence under which the article is made available to end users: a fundamental principle of open access is that content should not simply be accessible but should also be freely re-usable. Articles will be published under a Creative Commons Attribution license (CC-BY) by default. This means that the article is freely available to read, copy and redistribute, and can also be adapted (users can “remix, transform, and build upon” the work) for any commercial or non-commercial purpose, as long as proper attribution is given. Authors can, in the publishing agreement form, choose a different kind of Creative Commons license (including those prohibiting non-commercial and derivative use) if they prefer.

Authors must obtain written permission to publish any material for which they do not own copyright. Offprints may be purchased if ordered at proof stage on the form provided.

Copyediting and proofreading. The publisher reserves the right to copyedit and proofread all articles accepted for publication, but authors will be consulted in the case of any substantial changes. Page proofs of each article will be sent to the lead author for correction of typographical errors only.

Open Access. Legal Theory encourages authors to take full advantage of its flexible Green Open Access policy. The Submitted Manuscript may be posted on a personal webpage, departmental, institutional or subject repository or social media site at any time. The Accepted Manuscript may be posted on a personal webpage, departmental, institutional or non-commercial subject repository immediately on acceptance. While the journal does not allow the posting of the Accepted Manuscript on commercial repositories or the Version of Record anywhere, we encourage authors to post an earlier draft and abstract of their journal article and a link to the Version of Record that sits on the Cambridge website, to direct visitors to the definitive, citable work. Full details of this policy can be found in the Author Publishing Agreement. Please visit www.cambridge.org/core/services/open-access-policies for further information on our open access policies, compliance with major funding bodies, and guidelines on depositing your manuscript in an institutional repository.
