FAQ on Free Access Offer, for Librarians

Can you tell me about options for accessing Cambridge eBooks during this time?

We are turning on access to a collection of over 2000 eBooks hosted on Cambridge Core, for university libraries and their associated students and faculty. This collection includes our HTML textbooks, Cambridge Histories, Cambridge Companions, and Cambridge Elements – please visit the linked homepages for more information and title lists. If you're a librarian and would like access to this collection turned on for your institution, please contact online@cambridge.org if you're in the Americas, enquiries@cambridge.edu.au for Australia and New Zealand, or library.sales@cambridge.org for the United Kingdom and Rest of World.

We have also worked with several partners to provide free Cambridge textbooks access via outside platforms – please visit the below pages for more information.

Is there anything I should know about supporting student/faculty access to these materials?

Once activated, the offer provides IP-authenticated access included content for your institution, so users logging into your library network will have automatic access. We also support login via Shibboleth or Athens, if those are set-up in your institutional account.

Additionally, included textbooks are HTML and read-only, so users will not be able to download, copy/paste, or print content. Users will need an internet connection in order to access the content initially, and the functionality works best while using Google Chrome as web browser.

The books included in Cambridge Histories, Cambridge Companions, and Elements are DRM-Free and indexed on the chapter level with expected PDF functionality like print and download.

Can you provide more details about what is included, and where I can find the bibliographic data?

This collection includes free access to a collection of HTML textbooks, Cambridge Histories, Cambridge Companions, and Cambridge Elements – all told, over 2000 Cambridge University Press titles. Access is available through the end of May 2020.

Once your institutional access is activated, Cambridge will send a confirmation email, including all relevant MARC record files and KBART lists.

You can also download the KBART or MARC Records for the Cambridge Covid-19 Reference and Textbooks collection at the link above.
