CALL FOR SPECIAL ISSUE PROPOSALS

(For 2024 special issue)

Due January 10, 2023

The Editorial Board of CJLS/RCDS is seeking proposals for the 2024 special edition of the Journal (Volume 39, Issue 2 or Issue 3) for publication in 2024. The annual thematic special issue, curated by guest editors, will be selected by the Editorial Board during the winter 2023. Each issue explores a theme across a range of genres by contributions from a potentially diverse group of scholars. CJLS/RCDS is an interdisciplinary, peer-reviewed journal that produces cutting edge research dealing with law and its social and cultural context.

As of January 2023, all issues will be fully open access. For authors, this signifies that all articles accepted for publication for forthcoming volumes will be published with a non-exclusive Gold Open Access CC-BY licence (see here for more detail). Most corresponding authors will have their Article Processing Charge (APC) covered by a transformative agreement (check here to see if your institution is covered by an agreement), but any author not covered by a transformative agreement or other funding will have the APC waived. See this FAQ for more information.

Past special topics included:

- 2023 - Pandemics and Paradigms of Governance: Futures of the Rule of Law in the 21st Century
- 2021 - Democracy v. Democracy: religious rights by way of democratic processes
- 2020 - On the Margins of Trans Legal Change

Proposals by potential guest editors must comply with CJLS/RCDS Submission and Special Issue Guidelines aimed at assisting those interested in submitting manuscripts to CJLS/RCDS. Proposals should include both French and English contributions. See our Special Issue Guidelines and Schedule on the Journal website. Incomplete applications will not be considered.

Proposals should be emailed to cjls\_rcds@carleton.ca by January 10, 2023. For further information on the Journal, including the role of guest editors, and general information on the publication process, and the journal style guide, please visit the website.
