The Cambridge Learner Corpus

The Cambridge Learner Corpus is a unique collection of over 30 million words written by students taking Cambridge ESOL exams all around the world. It forms part of the Cambridge International Corpus, and has been developed by Cambridge University Press and Cambridge ESOL.

In addition, Cambridge University Press has developed a unique system called 'error coding' for highlighting the mistakes made by students in these exam scripts. This system is used in the Cambridge Learner Corpus to identify which words, grammar patterns, or language structures cause the most problems for students learning English. This 'error coding' system shows us, for example, the typical mistakes made by students at any particular exam level, from any language group and at any Common European Framework level. This means that Cambridge ELT books can always focus on the exact areas where students need help. The books in the Common Mistakes series, for instance, are based on the Cambridge Learner Corpus and highlight common mistakes made by real students.

Vocabulary
(Named and called)

• (C) First Certificate candidates often confuse named and called. Which words were used in extract 8 in Listening Part 1? Choose the correct alternative.

Man: What's the circus called / named by the way?
Woman: Let's see ... here it is. It's called / named Giffords Circus.

• Read these extracts from the Cambridge Advanced Learner's Dictionary and answer the questions which follow.

call (v) (often + object + name) to give someone or something a name, or to have an official connection to a particular state. They called the circus Zooless and Phoenix. His real name is Jonathan, but they're always calling him Shandy. Which her name wasn't called!

name (v) (T) to give someone or something a name. (I remember) We named our dog Shandy and Belle.

- 1 Which verb(s) can you use to mean to give someone or something a name for the first time and only the first time: call or name, or both call and name?
- 2 Which verb(s) can you use when you mention someone or something for the first time, but you haven't given it a name for the first time: call or name, or both call and name?
- 3 Which verb(s) can you use to mean that it is someone's or something's name: call or name, or both call and name?

• Correct the mistakes made in the following sentences by First Certificate candidates. Some sentences are correct. If you think a sentence is correct, write correct.

- 1 People who look after animals in zoos are named zoo keepers. called
- 2 We went to a bookshop in Oxford Street named Waterstones.
- 3 We named our children Kaiser and Andrea.
- 4 You can get here by taking a bus with a company named ABC Coaches.

ACADEMIC READING PASSAGE 2 Television Addiction

1 Introduction
Work in groups of three or four and discuss the following points.

- What does the bar chart show?
- Interview each other and draw bar charts for other members of your group.

EXERCISE 1

John Grant: division of average weekly TV watching

Now work with people from other groups and do the following:

- Present what you have found out about your colleagues.
- Draw conclusions for the whole class (e.g. men spend more time sleeping than women / students in this class spend an average of two hours a day watching television etc).

2 Reading
You are going to read an article about addiction to television. Before you read, discuss with your group whether you think it is possible to be addicted to television. If so, what are the symptoms?
Now skim the passage to find out what it says about this. Do this in four minutes.

Television addiction is no more metaphor

A The term 'TV addiction' is impressive, but it implies the existence of a very real phenomenon. Psychologists formerly defined addiction as a disorder characterised by criteria that include spending a great deal of time using the thing; being unable to think about anything besides the thing; having to use or make repeated unsuccessful efforts to reduce one's use; and experiencing withdrawal symptoms when one stops using it.

B All these criteria can apply to people who watch a lot of television. That does not mean that watching television, in itself, is problematic. 'Addiction' can occur and remain of use to the highly skilled worker: the difficulty arises when people watch it so much that they neglect to do much at all else they do and yet find they are unable to reduce their watching. Some knowledge of how 'addiction' becomes so addictive may help heavy TV viewers gain better control over their lives.

C The amount of time people spend watching television is increasing. On average, individuals in the industrialised world devote three hours a day to the activity - fully half of that leisure time, and more than on any single activity except work and sleep. At this rate, someone who lives in 'TV world' spends nine years in front of the television. Presumably, this devotion means simply that people enjoy TV and make a conscious decision to watch it.

D In the 1970s and 1980s, one out of five adults told interviewers that they spent too much time watching TV. Other surveys have consistently shown that roughly ten per cent of adults call themselves 'TV addicts'.
