Aging and immortality: the search for longevity

Questions to stimulate reflection

Would society be able to cope with increasing human lifespan to 1,000?

Would we be able to maintain our engagement with life if we lived for 1000 years?

To what extent does our motivation come from the fact we live a finite time?

Could an immortal being also be a human being?

Are our moral rights and responsibilities inextricably linked to our being human?

Could mortal beings and immortal beings successfully share a society?

Is aging a natural condition or a disease?

Are there any diseases it is not morally obligatory to cure?
