

CORRIGENDUM

---

Rapid reviews versus full systematic reviews: An inventory of current methods and practice in health technology assessment

Amber Watt, Alun Cameron, Lana Sturm, Timothy Lathlean, Wendy Babidge

Royal Australasian College of Surgeons

Stephen Blamey

Medical Services Advisory Committee

Karen Facey

University of Glasgow

David Hailey

Institute of Health Economics

Inger Norderhaug

Norwegian Knowledge Centre for the Health Services

Guy Maddern

University of Adelaide and Royal Australasian College of Surgeons

In the article entitled “Rapid reviews versus full systematic reviews: An inventory of current methods and practice in health technology assessment,” by Watt et al. in volume 24 number 2 (Spring 2008) of International Journal of Technology Assessment in Health Care, the affiliation of Stephen Blamey is incorrectly listed as Department of Health & Ageing. Dr. Blamey is the current Chair of the Medical Services Advisory Committee (MSAC). MSAC is an independent scientific committee comprising individuals with expertise in clinical medicine, health economics, and consumer matters. The Department of Health & Ageing administers funding and operations for MSAC. However, members of MSAC act independently of the Department. As Chair of MSAC, Dr. Blamey can be contacted through the Department. Dr. Blamey is not affiliated with the Department of Health and Ageing and his contribution to the above-mentioned article does not reflect its policy. Dr. Blamey wishes to apologize for this misunderstanding.