

CORRIGENDUM

How children in northern Canada represent the wolverine through drawings – CORRIGENDUM

Corrigendum

M Bonamy, A Harbicht and T Herrmann

Cite this article: Bonamy M, Harbicht A, and Herrmann T. CORRIGENDUM: How children in northern Canada represent the wolverine through drawings – CORRIGENDUM. Polar Record 57(e5): 1–1. <https://doi.org/10.1017/S0032247420000431>

There were a few errors in the above mentioned paper (Bonamy, Harbicht & Herrmann, 2020).

An incorrect corresponding author email address was given. The correct email is morganebon@netcourrier.com.

An incorrect version of figure 2 was published with the place names in French instead of English. The correct figure is given below.

Finally the acknowledgments section was omitted. This should have read:

The authors would like to thank the Dene Nation and the Naskapi Nation for their participation in this study. We also want to thank Sandy Shecanapish (Naskapi Nation) and all of the children, teachers, and directors from the schools (École Allain St-Cyr, Elizabeth Mackenzie, J.H. Sissons, K'alemi Dene, Mildred Hall, N.J. Macpherson, and Weledeh) and camp (Naskapi camp in Kawawachikamac) that participated. Finally, I would like to thank Marion Carrier and Philippe Major for their help in the field and the Quebec Centre for Biodiversity Science (QCBS) for funding they provided through a community workshop grant.

The publisher and authors apologise for these errors.

Reference

Bonamy, M., Harbicht, A., & Herrmann, T. (2020). How children in northern Canada represent the wolverine through drawings. Polar Record, 56, E31. doi: 10.1017/S0032247420000327